Statement of significance/ Reasons for designation

Architectural: 1939, designed by George Coles. Handsome brick face in Classical style with stone dressings. Three major bays, the outer ones, housing exits (now blocked), plain with entablature. Middle bay with central entrance comprising three double doors (one now blocked), canopy over. Above, three arched windows between engaged Ionic columns, all rising to a full entablature and parapet with balustrade over the centre bay.

Townscape: Contributes to the setting and character of the area. Key landmark.

Historical: The only remaining purpose-built ciné-variety theatre in Hayes. In 1962 it was called The Essoldo Theatre. Closed in 1967, the building was modified for bingo and has been well-maintained as a social club.
